I – READING COMPREHENSION (12 marks)

- 1- The end of the traditional school report will soon be announced as ministers plan to give parents daily electronic access to their children's school records.
- 2- All schools will be expected to set up 'real-time reporting' systems that will allow parents to see their children's attendance records, grades and discipline reports. The information could be made online or via e-mails, text messages or even teleconferencing, which will make it easier for parents to be regularly involved in their children's education and will improve school standards.
 "The systems will be more efficient and frequent than a once-a-year written report, or a letter home when there is a problem or something to celebrate," said Mr. Knight, the schools minister.
- 3- But security experts warned that any weaknesses in the Information Technologies systems opened up the risk of sensitive data going astray. Besides, teachers fear being overwhelmed with demands for information from parents.
- 4- "By 2010, all secondary schools should offer real-time reporting systems, with primary schools expected to follow two years later, said Mr. Knight. "All parents will be encouraged to buy a personal computer as it should be as important as going to school with a calculator or pencil case," he added.
- 5- The department of Children, Schools and Families will set aside £ 30 million over the next three years to help low-income families buy computers and connect to the internet. Mr. Knight will make his announcement at a computer industry conference, where he hopes to persuade manufacturers to support the government plan by offering discounted equipment.
- 6- The schools minister has promised that the new reporting systems will not add to teachers' workloads, but Mr. Sinnott, the general secretary of the National Union of Teachers, said: "there has to be evidence that the 'real-time reporting' systems do not increase teachers' workload before we can accept them."
